

4 Ideas with a Rope

Develops ability to create active play with the everyday

Have you ever tried to coil up a rope with a toddler around? All of a sudden you have a fish on the line, or a puppy on a lead, and now your rope is being dragged away for play. Pop a length of rope (or two!) in your active play box of tricks for hours of active, imaginative play.

Rope ideas unravelled:

- Tug-O-War - place a team on each end of the rope. Find a spot on the ground to mark as the middle. Yell "go" and everyone starts pulling...until one team is pulled across the line. Baby option - try gentle tug-o-war games using a soft cloth.
- Balance Bridge - tie two lengths of rope between two trees. Keep one close to the ground for standing on, and another one up higher for hanging onto.
- Jump the Snake - lay your rope on the ground and wiggle it from side to side like a snake. Encourage your child to "jump over the snake!" Try a running leap too!
- Tight Rope Walk - lay rope along the ground. Try walking along the rope from start to finish without stepping off the rope. This activity develops coordination and balance.

Develops upper body strength

Climbing, hanging and pulling develops large muscle skills.

Develops creativity

Rope play is open-ended - allowing your child to imagine and invent.

Develops social skills

Group activities engage children to work together and share.
